The new permaculture garden in the backyard of St. Barnabas's Episcopal Church will require several years of weeding, watering and careful attention before hopefully growing into a self-sustaining ecosystem of native plants and insects.

New Project With Habitat For Humanity

The homes created by Habitat for Humanity of Cape Cod are places where the residence will live for a long time. What we plant and how we plant it matters to the quality of the residences, as well as the regional environment and Habitat wants to be a part of doing this well.

ResilientRoot's mission is teach people how to create eco-friendly backyards that results in interconnected habitats through an ecological approach of planting natives and edibles. We empower people to grow food for the humans and be good stewards to the natural world.

In our pilot project with Habitat, Resilient Roots has created landscape plans for three homes in Sandwich. Plant selection includes native plants where ever possible and plants that are edible for humans and for wildlife. These designs will lead to a low-maintenance landscape, once the plants have become established.

The designs are complete, and now we wait for the houses to be complete. In the fall Resilient Roots will begin working with the new home owners of the three houses, to install eco-friendly edible landscapes and we will come back for every few months to mentor the residence on how to care for their new landscape and how to get the most out of it.

Right now we are busy caring for the plants that will be installed in September. If you would like to donate to this project click here. If you are interested in volunteering please let us know!

Great Feedback on Our First Permaculture Garden Tour!

We'd like to extend our thanks to the hosts who graciously opened their homes up and shared their knowledge and beautiful yards with us on June 10th and 11th. The proof is in the pudding, as they say, and we were able to see what amazing gardens come from using permaculture principles and techniques.

Volunteer Program at Fuller Farm

We have an ongoing group of incredible volunteers joining us weekly at Fuller Farm.
Let us know if you are interested in joining us!

Every volunteer contributes directly to Resilient Roots' success.

A few hours a week of your time offers invaluable support that brings our mission and services to the community.

As our organization grows, our volunteers learn more as they help us offer more.
